Our garments are packed in a BIOBASED, COMPOSTABLE BAG
T-shirts packed per 10
Polo, Sweaters and jogger packed per 5

The bag that we have chosen is a natural bag, made from PLA material (made from wheat, straw, corn stalks, ...), no plastic!

Bags made from this material can be thrown in your garden and/or disposed together with your green waste.

It will compost because the material itself comes from nature. No organized waste processing is required for this.

Furthermore, the material used to make the bag is TUV Austria certified, which guarantees the composability (and the fact that it is made from compostable material) of the article. The ink used for printing the polybag is water-based, so that it can be easily dissolved in water (after some time) (without the need for chemicals and therefore without chemical contamination).

A disadvantage is the storage time: the bag can be stored 12-18 months.
 After this time, the strength and quality of the material will start to decrease.

We mapped out the ECOLOGICAL FOOTPRINT of our collection together with Ecochain

Ecochain is a company who wants to encourage and empower sustainable change. They want to help companies make an impact by making ecological footprints accessible because understanding your ecological impact is the first step to efficiently reducing it.

To be able to map out the footprint of our collection, we have started by creating LCA (life cycle assessment) analysis for each item. An LCA is an analysis of the impact an object has on the world around it.

We mapped the life cycle of our items from cradle to gate, meaning from making/ harvesting the fiber to the delivery in our warehouse. For comparisons and publication of the results, we mainly looked at CO₂ and water savings.
